

The Digital Place-makers Program is starting now!

Starting on September 4th, 15 participants with lived experience of displacement will learn in the following 6 weeks how to create, produce and edit a short audiovisual piece that reflects on their perspectives of place-making.

We are excited to share with you that in the last few weeks we have finalized the interview process with 15 participants! Now, we are getting ready to start a 6-week program in which they will learn different photography and filming techniques to create, produce and edit their own digital narratives.

What are we looking for? A better understanding of their perspectives on place-making: How do they create a sense of place? What challenges and opportunities do they encounter in their everyday life to do so? How do they think their daily media experiences and of others around them and their community shape their sense of place? These are some questions that will guide the process of the program.

We invite you to visit our website where you can keep up to date with the weekly sessions, activities, and insights about the Digital Place-makers' experiences!
